Persian City of Hamadan Has Had a Prominent Place Throughout the Centuries.

Hamadan, in Persia, figures in Biblical as well as early Grecian history. It was the ancient Ecbatana, the treasure city captured and plundered by Alexander the Great, and it appears in the Book of Esther as Shushan, where Ahasuerus, who "reigned from India 30 feet with a grand piano, which fell even unto Ethiopia," gave way to the caprices of Vashti and was induced to relent by the attraction of Esther.

At Hamadan pious Jews still point out the tombs of Mordecai and Esther, which stand in a wooden-domed building in the center of the town. There is no doubt that the two wooden sarcophagi shown there are ancient, but there is considerable question of their being what tradition ascribes. They bear Hebrew inscriptions, one said to be of A. D. 557 and the other 841 A. D. Near the city a large mound is pointed out as the site of the palace of Ahasuerus. A crudely carved lion,

Five miles from Hamadan, in a mountain gorge, is a famous stone with inscriptions in the Persian, Median and Babylonian languages, which seems to have been placed there by Xerxes. These inscriptions supplied the key that enabled the cuneiform inscriptions at Nineveh to be deciphered. The natives believe treasure lies buried under the stone.

Hamadan was once famous for its white wines, but now its chief business is leather, which is much in demand in Persia for harness and saddles. Residents say the stench from the tanning pools prevents the clocks from keeping the correct time. Its population numbers 40;000, including 4,000 Jews, and its position 6,000 feet above the sea makes it a healthy place to live in.

GOOD THAT COMES OF WORK

Occupation Healthful to a Remarkable Degree If It Is Used in the Right Way.

Work is simply a means of making a living. It is that, of course, or ought to be. But it has other attributes that are quite as valuable, and maybe, in the ways of the spirit, more so.

The work you do is an equivalent to the world, for it gives you food, clothing, shelter, amusement, the material of this outer life. That's the debt side of work.

But work has other sides, and the creative part of work is its effect on the worker. If you are getting mental training, intellectual development, and interesting occupation from your work, you are beginning to get out of it what it is really intended to give.

If you use your work to help build your character you are using it the right way.

Even in such minor things as punctuality, neatness, directness, ease of intercourse with others, temper control, and good manners, work offers big training. And there are greater things than that in which it should teach and help you.

You will usually find that the man or woman who works is more sympathetic to the troubles of others than he or she who does nothing. The girl who works finds time to help her sisters, finds money to give to charity, finds the right word to say when the word is needed.

Honor and honesty are taught by work. The business woman is not apt to tease and wheedle for what she wants, she is not likely to cheat in small or big matters, she is not given to lying. It doesn't pay in work, for one thing. And unconsciously this tends to character building.

MRS. LANGTRY DRAWS MORAL

Celebrated English "Actress" Permits Herself to Preach a Sermon on Accepted Life in America.

Mrs. Langtry mentioned at a luncheon in Washington that she intends to write a book of impressions gathered during her recent American tour.

"One feature of American life which interests me," said the charming actress, "is the relation between parents and children. The independence -I almost said indifference-of American children towards their parents shocks the European mind. I believe that the young Frenchman of twentythree is more under the thumb of his father and mother than is the American girl of sixteen. Your children desert their parents long before they should, but American parents accept this desertion as naturally as the hen accepts the desertion of her brood.

"I hope, though," she continued, "that the story a New York broker

"'I have been to Rochester to see my father and mother,' the girl re-

"By Jove!" the broker exclaimed. 'And how did you find them?"

"'Oh, I knew where they lived,' said the girl."

HEAD BRUISED, PIANO RUINED

Instrument Falls Distance of Thirty Feet and Splinters on Man, Whose Injuries Are Trivial.

Only slightly dazed when he dropped on top of him and was badly damaged, Morris Gross, twenty-eight years old, colored, was held for further examination in the West Philadelphia Homeopathic hospital, where the physicians were puzzled at being able to find merely a few scalp lacerations instead of the fractured skull they expected.

Gross is a piano mover. At Sixtysecond and Arch streets he was one of several moving men who had been hired to hoist a piano to the top floor of a four-story building. Gross had the job of "riding" the piano to keep it from swaying into contact with the brick wall. Between the second and third floors the rope broke, and Gross and the piano were dropped to the sidewalk. A corner of the plane landed squarely on the man's head and shoulders. He was taken to the hospital, and a short time later appeared none the worse for his accident, which he says is his fourth. The cement sidewalk was cracked in several places.

Where Did the Kite Fly. Where did Franklin fly his immortal

Daughters of the Revolution wish to place a tablet near the spot, but three places have claimed the honor, Sixth and Spruce, Ninth and Ridge avenue and Ninth and Chestnut, according to the Philadelphia Ledger.

This same question was threshed over when Justus C. Strawbridge donated the fine statue of Franklin to day. the city. Mr. Strawbridge, after careful investigation, agreed that the post office occupies the field where the famous kite flew that summer day in 1752, and so his statue was placed where you now see it.

Moved Quinine Trees.

Sir Clements Robert Markham, explorer, traveler, archeologist, who inyielding cinchona trees from Peru in British India, an act of incalculable value to the world at large, is now eighty-five years of age. For many years he held the presidency of the Royal Geographical society. His life has been one of travel and adventure, beginning with the navy in 1844. He served in the arctic expedition of 1850-1851, and the following year left the navy. Then followed journeys of a scientific nature to Peru and Abyssinia, and in 1867 he became secretary of the India office. Many volumes of travels, history and of a general character came from his pen, including the masterly "The Incas of Pera"

"I Am a Cat."

A Japanese critic in the New Republic described a recent humorous masterpiece in Japanese literature. The tradition is that Japanese literature very seldom smiles. 'I am a Cat' appeared in our literature to relieve the long strain of lachrymose history with a thoughtful, cynical smile-a smile, at any rate. It is the biography of a nameless cat residing in the home of an absent-minded professor. The cat is baptized in a gutter of Tokyo and saves himself from the hands of a brusque student with an enormous stomach and a big stick trying to pay him a compliment, which marks the first episode of the feline career. He goes into the professor's house and observes the ingenuity and prejudice of that somnolent specimen of humanity, and there he stays in spite of his tastes and philosophy, and the story of M. Anatole France lies mainly in the nature of their smile, the difference of mewing smile and barking smile."
